

FGV EAESP: São Paulo School of Business Administration

Selection Process for the Next Dean

The FGV São Paulo School of Business Administration (FGV EAESP) is opening a selection process to choose its next dean, succeeding Professor Luiz Artur Ledur Brito, whose term ends soon.

Choosing the new dean is an opportunity to build on FGV EAESP's tradition of excellence while preparing the School for the challenges and opportunities of a new cycle of academic and institutional development.

A Search Committee, created specifically for this purpose, will lead the process; this committee is composed of five members. The Committee will review résumés, receive nominations, identify and interview potential candidates, and use any means it deems necessary to conduct the process. The process is expected to conclude in January 2027.

Candidate Profile

Candidates must meet the following qualifications:

- a doctoral degree;
- relevant academic output;
- experience in academic or institutional management, or in projects of equivalent relevance;
- fluency in English; and
- professional work recognized by the national and international academic community.

The Dean's Mission

The new dean will have the mission of leading FGV EAESP in fulfilling its vocation for academic excellence and societal impact, strengthening its position as a national and international reference in education, research, and leadership development.

The dean will be responsible for, among other duties set out in the FGV EAESP Bylaws:

- leading the School in defining and implementing its academic and institutional priorities;

- fostering an environment of excellence, innovation, and collaboration that attracts, develops, and inspires faculty, researchers, students, and other professionals;
- strengthening the production and dissemination of cutting-edge knowledge, expanding the School's relevance in Brazil and internationally;
- contributing to educating new generations of leaders prepared to face the economic, social, environmental, and technological challenges of a changing world;
- expanding the School's connections with companies, civil society organizations, governments, and academic institutions in Brazil and abroad; and
- ensuring the sustainability and continued institutional development of FGV EAESP, preserving its values while preparing it for the challenges of the future.

Compensation

The new dean of FGV EAESP will receive compensation commensurate with the importance and responsibilities of the position.

Prerequisites

- Not having been dismissed from duties at FGV;
- having availability to begin work in February 2027.

Submission of Documents

Candidates must submit:

- Curriculum vitae (CV), including a description of main activities carried out and details of academic training and international experience in the field of Business Administration.
- Contact information, including full address, email, and phone numbers.
- Management Plan, up to three pages, personal in nature, presenting the candidate's vision and main priorities for the School's development over the next three years.

The documents must be sent to the Chair of the Search Committee, Professor Maria Tereza Leme Fleury, by email at Diretoria.eaesp@fgv.br.
